RUMS

Rum as we know has come a long, long way and was one of the products manufactured on the plantations of the West Indies by slave labour. It has a long-standing reputation as a bartering tool in exchange for newly trafficked slaves from Africa or supplied by traders in the ports of the Caribbean. Most of the produce of rum was shipped to England for consumption with extremely high profits for both the aristocracy and plantation owners.

Rum has had an amazing association with the British Navy and was said they ran on rum as each sailor had a generous allowance. I for one as a child and coming from a West Indian family was brought up in family descended from rum slavery to rum making. So, here's my first stab at creating a small introduction into what I believe an amazing spirit category, "over ice all the way for me"

Note: Our rums are sold via the shot 25ml or 50ml, any mixers please add £2.00 per mixer
